A Valuable Addition to the Children's Diet–
and irresistibly delicious

WHETHER it is taken direct from the spoon or used as a spread on bread, 'Vimaltol' is irresistibly delicious and just as nice as the nicest jam. This is a point which all nurses who have the care of children will appreciate.

Moreover, this concentrated vitamin food, with the delightfully sweet orange flavour, possesses important nutritive properties which all children need. It provides vitamins and food elements required for increasing strength and weight, and is an excellent aid in forming firm bones and teeth, and fortifying resistance against coughs, colds and other ailments.

The vitamins are supplied from specially prepared malt extract and yeast, which is one of the richest natural sources of vitamin B, together with Halibut Liver Oil fortified with additional vitamins. Vimaltol is standardised to contain in each ounce:

463 international units of Vitamin A and 994 of Vitamin D; also 0.09 milligrammes of Vitamin B_1, 3 of the P.P. Vitamin, 3.4 of iron, 34 of calcium and 34 of phosphorus.

For all these reasons 'Vimaltol' is a valuable addition to every child's diet. By raising the general resistance against infection it provides an additional safeguard of health at all times.

The principle behind

Wright's Coal Tar Soap

In Liquor Carbonis Detergens the antiseptic and antipruritic agents in Coal Tar were isolated for the first time from the inert residuum of substances lacking therapeutic value, and the preparation has been used and recommended by skin specialists for over 80 years. It naturally followed that Liquor Carbonis Detergens was included in the basic formula of Wright's Coal Tar Soap. This powerful antiseptic principle gave the soap a character and value exclusively its own without the slightest risk of harshness to the skin. Wrights, in fact, is specially soothing and particularly thorough in its cleansing.

what MILTON is . . .

6. THE NON-IRRITANT HYPOCHLORITE★

Milton has a lower pH than the other hypochlorite solutions commonly used. A low alkalinity means increased bactericidal efficiency and avoids irritation to the tissues.

"A low alkalinity is a much greater factor in disinfection with hypochlorites than is the concentration of available chlorine." (A. S. Rudolph, Iowa St. Coll. J. Sc., 17, 114, (1942).

Milton is an electrolytically prepared 1% solution of sodium hypochlorite. It is less alkaline than any other hypochlorite at the equivalent concentration.

When Milton is compared with Dakin's Solution at the equivalent concentration of available chlorine w/v it is again much less alkaline.

For low alkalinity, the choice is MILTON, not any hypochlorite

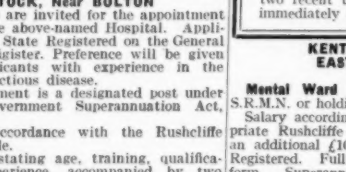
ACTIVE AT BODY TEMPERATURE...



When an Anusol Suppository is placed on a piece of plate glass and heated slightly, it will resolve and spread evenly. This demonstrates graphically how Anusol Suppositories melt at body temperature to form a fine emollient film that lubricates the affected rectal area. Thus by their soothing action, friction is minimized, and congestion subsides. Anusol Suppositories contain no narcotic or anaesthetic drugs that might mask symptoms and give a false sense of security.

Nursing Times

VOL. XLI. No. 3 · SATURDAY, JANUARY 20, 1945

EDITOR: MISS K. F. ARMSTRONG, S.R.N., S.C.M., DIPLOMA IN NURSING, LONDON UNIVERSITY

A "Hush-Hush" Matter

"IS it I ?" "Is it I ?" "Is it I ?" Doubtless this cry of the disciples ran in the minds of many nurses last week when they read the letter published in The Times on January 12. An exasperated patient had written thanking the paper for giving publicity to the need for further improvement in hospital dietary but stating that there was another need as important as food—and that was sleep. Let us quote the correspondent's own words : "Sleep, that second great restorative, is even less easy to come by, and noise both day and night seems to be taken so much for granted that it might be part of the cure. Heavy doors bang and reverberate throughout the building, trolleys rattle and bump, bedpans, etcetera, are bashed against the sluices, voices are raised, in fact no thought is ever given to the need for quiet in anything—it is beyond the realm of hospital imagination. So that except when drugged there is no hope of sleep. Even if one dozes off in a lull the night sisters on their rounds wake one up by shining a torch in one's face."

The writer, one is inclined to feel, was in a bad mood. But was he ? Absolute quiet is difficult to attain, but the Bedlam he describes is surely an exaggeration or, if it really did exist, the hospital in which he lies is a bad one, both structurally and in its running. Yet it could all so easily have happened, if everyone were not taking care to prevent it. He does not state the name of the hospital : perhaps it is as well, for it should make every nurse in every hospital look at herself to discover whether or not she might be the sinner, and so benefit larger numbers.

It is true that to subdue noise is very difficult. The sick are, as a rule, more sensitive to noise than the well, and the nurses, perhaps also the domestic staff and porters, are, to-day, younger and have had less training in being quiet than had girls of their age 30 to 40 years ago. What a lot of noise is tolerated in the average ordinary house to-day without comment ! It is therefore much more diffucult to make young people sensitive to sound : to make them aware when they are making a noise.

Training the young nurse or wardmaid to work and move quietly, to see that their trolleys are kept in good order so that they neither squeak nor rattle, is not easy : it is a job that goes on continuously in every hospital, we feel sure, though we do not think that an oil-can is generally considered an essential part of ward equipment, and trolley wheels are sometimes meticulously cleaned without oiling. However, the engineer's department can and should service these things to make them last and keep them working efficiently. On the other hand, the architect of the modern hospital can and does help. He supplies swing doors which cannot slam, perhaps, or fits doors with anti-slam springs or rubber edges : all of these have their uses. However, they breed bad habits and, when they are fitted in modern nurses' homes but are absent in old-fashioned wards, they make the nurse careless when she comes to a ward door not so designed.

The average hospital ward with its bare, hygienic floors does not assist the quest for quietness, and such noise as there is echoes from wall to wall and from floor to ceiling. The same is true of its corridors. The use of rubber floorings, is invaluable here, but it was expensive before the war and is, we imagine, unobtainable now. Since carpeting of any kind is unsuitable, perhaps we may benefit ultimately from the production of synthetic rubber when the war is over, and something which will take the place of carpet in preventing noise without harbouring germ infection may become more readily procurable. The noise of washing bed-pans and the like can be reduced by a short corridor between ward and sluice-room and the use of a modern pattern of flusher : even so the intervening doors have got to be closed and the work done with the thought of the avoidance of noise as a conscious and constant aim.

The washing up of crockery and the setting of trolleys for meals are a source of noise which could be and should be removed. We hope that in every new hospital planned, washing up will not be done in the wards at all, where a single ward maid normally works by herself—always a boring job. We should like to see service rooms in which washing up machines do the work for a series of wards more hygienically, with less noise, less breakage, less, labour, and with happier workers. If hospital boards took advice from successful business concerns which have to handle daily all the washing-up for 500 to 1,000 persons, would they not suggest washing up machines rather than maids who get bored doing the work day after day, and generally working alone ?

Of course, noise at night is sometimes the fault of the hospitals' plan of administration. There are nurses on duty at night and they must be kept employed : they are sometimes given very unsuitable tasks, be they ever so careful how they carry them out. To begin with, one, at least, must be in the ward to keep an eye on the patients. There are quiet jobs like cutting stock, sewing on tapes and buttons, padding splints, cleaning instruments, and the like, which they can do if they are careful without disturbing anyone. There are other jobs like turning out cupboards and drawers in the ward itself, washing the bed-pans and ward crockery in the annexes, which cannot but disturb a light sleeper.

And the voices of the workers—how can we ensure that they are never raised to an irritating degree. Only by example and teaching. Shakespeare put it better in King Lear than we can : "Her voice was ever soft, gentle and low,—an excellent thing in woman." Certainly excellent in woman, but more than excellent in a nurse : so essential in a nurse that no one who cannot claim it, however perfect she be as a technician, can consider herself a first-class nurse. None of us likes to consider herself and her work second class. Do we make sufficient effort to achieve the best in this connection ?

The patient does not give his name or the hospital's name, but contents himself with suggesting that secretaries and members of hospital committees shall test his words by passing a night in a general ward. We wonder if he has also taken the obvious step of taking the ward sister and matron into his confidence. Surely before he leaves, if things are as bad as he says, he could go to those who are directly responsible for the workers in the ward : if that produces no effect he should, for the sake of the other patients, let the secretary know, and not be content merely to make a generalised grumble instead of lodging a particular complaint. It is little good grumbling if we have not the courage to state our case openly.

This quotation from a patient's letter is a depressing thing to contemplate. Let us turn from it, without forgetting it, to another. It comes from a patient's book, The Way of Recovery, by Squadron Leader W. Simpson D.F.C. He writes : 'The second thing (responsible for the cheerfulness of the ward in a plastic unit) is the way the nurses have come to accept us automatically as quite normal human beings—as indeed we are behind our forbidding exteriors. They have taught us to laugh at each other and ourselves. They are cheerful when we are fed up and gentle when we are in pain. They understand us, and they turn this understanding to practical and comforting ends.' How cheering it is to read something like this! The last sentence is the clue to everything. 'They understand us and they turn this understanding to practical and comforting ends.' If the patient in hospital who complains of the noise could only say this, too. Are his nurses really trying to understand him and is he helping them to do so ?

Topical Notes

Another Memorandum

THE Society of Medical Officers of Health has published a memorandum setting out its views with regard to the White Paper on 'A National Health Service.' Some of its conclusions will appeal to the nursing profession though some of its statements will hardly have the full support of nurses. The memorandum suggests, as does that of the Royal College of Nursing, that Local Government be reformed, and new Local Government Areas shall be established, in which there shall be a single authority for health purposes and that the new Health Services shall be administered in the larger local government areas required by elected bodies responsible for the other services of local government.

Nursing Included?

THE Society suggests that these local authorities should be given powers " to plan and develop their hospital, health and allied services and that, in connection with the development of these services, the local authorities should be empowered after consultation with the local medical profession to determine the method or methods of staffing most appropriate for the hospital, health centres or domiciliary practice in the whole or parts of their area." There is no indication whether staffing here refers only to medical staff or also includes nursing staff. Ought not nursing staff to be included, and the local nursing profession also to be consulted about it ? Certainly all three, hospital, health centre, and domiciliary services, will need a satisfactory nursing staff, if they are to function efficiently.

Not an Encouraging Proportion

THE Society of Medical Officers of Health advocates what this paper has always advocated strongly, the desirability of making health centres essentially preventive as well as curative, and the need to link the maternity and child welfare services with the centres to bring this about effectively. The Society does not approve of the proposed Joint Authorities to plan and administer the hospital and health services stating that they are unnecessary as it is already the function of County Borough and County Councils to provide hospitals with appropriate staff and that since the Public Health Act was passed in 1930 conferring on local authorities the power to set up municipal hospitals by the appropriation of Public Assistance Infirmaries, local authorities have diligently pursued this policy considering the calamities which have occurred in our national life. In fact this diligent pursuit had resulted in 1938, in 54 out of the 145 larger local authorities establishing these general hospitals—not a high proportion but the Emergency Medical Service has caused certainly the upgrading of many of the infirmaries and without doubt has greatly increased the country's hospital facilities.

New Suggestion for Hospital Planning

THE Society advocates instead of Joint Authority Boards, Area Hospital Councils to submit proposals to the Minister as to the distribution of hospitals in the areas, after consultation with the appropriate authorities. The Minister should have, it suggests, the power to approve and enforce the proposals which would be carried out by existing hospital authorities, municipal or voluntary, singly or jointly. Unfortunately the memorandum gives no facts as to the proposed composition of the Area Hospital Councils which it advocates, so that it is difficult to support it fully, though there are points to recommend the idea.

Defeating the Louse

WRITING in the Leader Magazine of January 13, Dr. N. M. Goodman, Deputy Director, European Division of U.N.R.R.A., whose lecture " The Health of Europe " forms the first article of " For European Relief " (reproduced from the Nursing Times, obtainable from the Royal College of Nursing, price 2s.), describes the use of D.D.T., the anti-louse powder. It has no ill effects on the human skin. American doctors have lived in its atmosphere for months without any ill effects. ' It has no idiosyncrasies,' he says, ' or at least we have not so far met anyone who is sensitive to it. It kills the lice within some 24 hours, and its potency lasts for some considerable time. It does not kill the eggs but, provided one does not wash too much and the powder stays on, it will kill the young lice as they hatch out. The old method of bathing an infected person, cutting his hair, disinfecting his clothes, etc., was satisfactory, but five minutes afterwards he might be re-infected.' Dr. Goodman describes how, in Naples, squads of blowers went round the shelters, rousing each person, making him stand and blowing D.D.T. powder up his trouser legs and sleeves, down his shirt and through his hair and he was deloused almost before he awoke. Provided he did not take too many baths, he would be protected from re-infection for two or three weeks. This, together with the anti-typhus vaccine, which Dr. Goodman says, although not 100 per cent. effective as a protection, will almost certainly prevent death and probably reduce the incidence of typhus, will, surely, be very effective weapons against what would otherwise be a real peril to the starving and ill-housed peoples of Europe.

For the Nation's Health

LAST week Mr. H. U. Willink, Minister of Health, met the members of the negotiating committee of the medical profession for the first time to discuss the Government's White Paper, 'A National Health Service,' which, we believe, has been under informal discussion between the Minister and representatives of the medical profession already for some time. The committee consists of 31 delegates who represent the British Medical Association, the three Royal Colleges, the Physicians, the Surgeons and the Obstetricians and Gynaecologists, the Royal Scottish Medical Corporations, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, the Medical Women's Federation and the Society of Apothecaries. Having accepted the principle of a National Health Service, they will discuss its implementation and not merely their own interests but the ways and means by which the people can best be served, bringing the wide knowledge and experience which these bodies represent to bear on the necessarily intricate matters of the health of people of all ages.

Representing Medical School Hospitals

REPRESENTATIVES of the Voluntary Teaching Hospitals of Great Britain have decided to form an Association so that there shall be a body available which can represent those hospitals which have medical schools attached to them and will have specialized knowledge and experience of the problems peculiar to these hospitals. That these hospitals have their own difficulties is obvious. If they are to provide medical training they must be able to give the student access to medical conditions of every kind; they may have to limit the numbers of cases of the common diseases they can admit to make room for the rarer conditions which may not improve greatly under hospital treatment, but which the qualified doctor must be able to recognise. They cannot always put the patient first: the education of the medical man and the care of the sick have to have equal consideration for the ultimate benefit, not only of the patients in the hospital but of all those outside whose care will depend on the skill and knowledge of the well-trained doctor.

Courage Rewarded

NOTHING is more heartening in the midst of all the horror and seemingly senseless suffering of war than to come upon some new example of the constantly growing list of heroic men and women who in the course of their daily duties provide ever new evidence of the courage and idealism that human nature is capable of. It is indeed right that they should receive some concrete sign of the country's recognition of the debt humanity owes them, but the Honours Lists are even more important, in that they do afford an opportunity for us all to become aware of their acts of heroism and rekindle our faith in the race of men that at times seems to have made so poor a job of civilisation. Among the latest names on the list are three nurses on the hospital-carrier 'Amsterdam,' which was torpedoed off Normandy in August. Miss Elsie Roberts, of Formby, Lancashire, Miss Lily McNicholas, of Kiltamagh, County Mayo, and Miss Ellen Hourigan, of Ballingarry, County Limerick, have all been awarded the M.B.E. for their courage and devoted care of the wounded in this great ordeal. Another nurse to whom men from all over the world eagerly acknowledge their gratitude is Miss Mona Smith of Aberdeen, the nursing sister in charge of the Malta branch of the Soldiers' Sailors' and Airmen's Families Association. At the height of the bombardment Miss Smith and the naval doctor were in constant attendance on the injured and many presents of fruit and food in the great time of food shortage were brought her by the people of the island in their gratitude. Another who has paid the ultimate price of "living dangerously" in the cause of her fellow-men is Flight-Nurse First-Lieutenant Adela Lutz, who was killed when a plane in which she was attending 15 patients crash-landed recently, and who has been awarded posthumously the U.S. D.F.C.

Potent Ambassador

THE plan to form an Academy of Medicine as a first step to unite the many aspects of medical science is still under discussion. The site in Lincoln's Inn Fields, where the Royal Colleges of Physicians, Surgeons and Obstetricians and Gynaecologists could stand side by side, is available: it includes the site on which the Royal College of Surgeons stood and adjacent land which it has purchased. Correspondents to The Times—Lord Dawson of Penn, Sir Stewart Duke-Elder and Lord Horder, Sir Alfred Webb-Johnson and others—point out that the implications would be world wide: they would reach not merely the governing bodies of the three colleges but the whole medical profession, the British public, who are anxious to hear an authoritative rather than a sectional voice on matters of health, and the liberated countries in Europe, who are looking for a stimulus and lead in medical science. There could surely be no firmer foundations on which to build contentment among the warring nations than co-operation on subjects which are of such vital importance to them all. An Academy in London, symbolizing and strengthening the union of the many-varied interests which go to the making of medical science, might help; but it would mean a sacrifice of associations for colleges asked to move.

NURSING IN THE TROPICS

2.—Climate as a Disease Factor

By Miss C. L. Houlton, C.B.E., M.D., F.C.O.G., Physician to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel

Treatment for heat-stroke: a medical orderly spraying a Service patient with cold water. Afterwards he will be fanned. This often severe illness can be prevented by a timely recognition of the danger inherent in a tropical climate

CLIMATIC conditions affect the health of human beings in several ways:

(a) Directly. — The conditions of air temperature, moisture and movement, taken together, may be favourable to the vitality and energy of the body, they may act unfavourably by lowering resistance to disease, or they may actually cause diseases like heat-stroke or frost-bite. Light may act in a favourable or unfavourable manner; excess of light causes solar dermatitis and night blindness; defect of light is one of the causes of rickets and osteomalacia.

(b) Indirectly.—The crops of a place and hence the foods of the people depend largely on climate. Insect life, too, is much influenced by climate and diseases which are conveyed by insects can only be transmitted when the climatic conditions are suitable for the existence of the insects, for the development of the disease parasites in their bodies, and for their ability to bite human beings. The spread of many diseases like malaria, plague, relapsing fever, cholera, etcetera, is greatly influenced by climate; warm, moist heat favours the spread of cholera and dysentery; hot, dry heat will stay the spread of an epidemic of plague.

Effects of Tropical Climate on the Body

When the human body is exposed to cold it is compelled to generate enough heat to make up for the loss of heat which takes place from the skin and respiratory tract, hence the muscles are kept in a state of tone even when they are not doing any obvious work. Cold in moderation keeps the body in a vigorous condition and maintains its power of resistance to disease. In very hot weather, especially when a high air temperature is accompanied by excessive moisture and lack of movement of the air, the body has to contend against a set of unfavourable conditions: the cooling effect of the air combined with evaporation from the body surface may be only just sufficient to keep the temperature within normal limits, even when the muscles are relaxed and all the other tissues are inactive. In such conditions exercise is almost impossible as work is accompanied by a great increase in heat production and so is likely to cause a rise of temperature; the appetite is feeble because assimilation of food causes increased heat production; the body has no opportunity of reacting to cold and hence loses the power of doing so.

Persons exposed for long periods to these conditions tend to become enfeebled and lose their resistance to disease. Their mental energy is also sapped. In cold countries steps are taken to heat dwelling houses, but in the tropics the art of cooling houses is little known although it is much more necessary for the maintenance of health than artificial heating in cold climates. If offices and living rooms were effectively cooled, life in tropical countries might be as healthy and comfortable as in cold climates.

Sunlight as a Cause of Health or Disease

The rays of the sun have different properties according to their wavelengths: infra-red and red rays cause heating and, in excess, produce heat exhaustion and heat fever; orange, yellow and green rays are chiefly illuminating and in excess may cause glare headache and night blindness; blue, indigo, violet and ultra-violet rays have chemical properties and are stimulating and anti-rachtic in moderate doses, but in excess are irritant and destructive of tissue and cause solar dermatitis and pigmentation.

The Tropical Sun.—In the tropics all the rays of the sun tend to be more powerful than in cool climates, but they have no mysterious and dangerous powers such as are often attributed to them. The real harm done by the rays of the tropical sun consists in their powerful heating effect on the body so that, when a person is exposed to trying atmospheric conditions, the direct heating action of the sun's rays adds greatly to his discomfort and also to the risk of heat stroke. The wearing of a solar topi in bright sunlight is a necessary precaution, but it is not necessary in the shade or when the sun is near the horizon.

Some people in the tropics carry their dread of the sun to absurd limits and remain in darkened rooms throughout the day, and so lose all stimulation of the ultra-violet rays. In the cool of the morning a moderate exposure of the body to light is beneficial, but excessive exposure is most injurious.

Artificial Cooling of Houses.—In large industrial centres systems of cooling are gradually being introduced into offices, hospitals, operation theatres, cinemas, etcetera, but the great majority of houses are without this amenity. The incoming air is cooled by being blown by a fan over the cold pipes of a refrigerating plant. Air is constantly drawn from the room by the same fan which forces the cool air into the room.

The net result is a regular supply of cool, fresh air, free from dust and insects. At present the cost of the installation is prohibitive for private houses, and less expensive methods have to be used. In places where dry heat prevails, a room can be kept cool by a khus-khus tatti: a good electric exhaust fan is fitted into a hole in a door. To the outside of the door is fitted a frame into which a khus-khus screen is attached in such a way that all air sucked into the room by the fan must pass over the screen, which is kept constantly moist by a drip from a cistern placed overhead. The door should face the prevailing wind. If a second exhaust fan is placed at the other end of the room all doors and windows being closed, a constant flow of cool, fresh air, will be provided—an invaluable arrangement in an operating theatre or a hospital ward. In places where there is no electric supply good results can be obtained simply by a khus-khus screen, provided there is a good wind.

Diseases Caused by Heat

The only disease proved to be directly caused by heat is heat-stroke; this may take the form of heat-fever, heat-shock, heat-exhaustion or heat-cramp. There are also certain other conditions which are usually attributed to residence in hot countries such as tropical anaemia, tropical neurasthenia and tropical liver. As there is little definite knowledge about the latter I shall deal briefly with them first.

Tropical Anaemia.—Long residence in the tropics appears to cause a reduction both in the red cells and in the haemoglobin which may lead to mental and physical weakness, pallor, palpitation and oedema of the feet. There is no proof that this condition is due to the heat and most cases are probably due to other causes, such as malaria, dysentery, hookworm, etcetera.

Tropical Neurasthenia.—Neurasthenia is certainly more common in some tropical countries than in cool climates, but when it occurs it is usually in a subject who has a previous tendency to the condition and the attack has been precipitated by strain of life rather than the climate. In the tropics there are certain factors which lower the vitality, such as prolonged exposure to heat and light, depressing environment due to absence of congenial society, poor food and debilitating illnesses like malaria, dysentery, etcetera. If to these factors are added worry and overwork there is likely to be a nervous breakdown, especially in a person of an unstable nervous system. I have already spoken of its prevention.

A Result of Wrong Habits

Tropical Liver.—There is little evidence of disturbance of liver function among persons who lead rational lives. Those who eat excessive amounts of meat, drink too much alcohol and take too little exercise must expect to suffer from liver upsets. Wrong habits of life and indiscretions of diet will lead to toxic absorption which will cause damage to the liver indicated by headache, furred tongue and lethargy, but the climate should not be blamed for the Colonel's peppery temper.

Heat-stroke.—It is best to consider heat-stroke under the forms in which it may occur :

(1) Heat-fever is a fever caused by climatic conditions in which the heat regulating mechanism fails to keep the body temperature below the normal upper limit. The name sun-stroke is not a good term for this state, as the disease can occur in the hold of a ship or a darkened room. The living body constantly generates heat; its temperature would rise steadily if no loss of heat occurred. In normal conditions heat-production and heat-loss are balanced in such a way that the body temperature keeps within narrow limits irrespective of the temperature of the air or the rate of heat-production by the body. This balance as you know is maintained by the heat-regulating centre in the medulla. In cold weather the heat-loss takes place chiefly by radiation and convection of heat from the surface of the body. In warm weather evaporation plays a much larger part and in very hot weather is the sole means of heat loss. When the air temperature is higher than the body temperature, heat is actually taken up from the air by the body, so that evaporation has to take on the task of getting rid of the excess heat resulting from heat-production and the excess due to the heating of the body by the air. A big strain is thus put on the heat-regulating mechanism to keep the temperature normal. If the strain is too great the body temperature begins to rise and heat fever follows.

Factors Favouring Heat Fever

Experiments have been made both on animals and humans which show that the following factors favour heat fever : (a) a high air temperature; (b) a high air moisture associated with a high temperature; (c) stillness of the air as it lessens the heat loss caused by evaporation; (d) muscular exertion as it causes increased heat-production; (e) warm and tight clothing as it prevents heat loss; (f) alcohol—heat fever picks out alcohol addicts; (g) disease and bodily weakness, persons who have malaria, dengue and other fevers are very liable to heat-fever, so are persons after child-birth and after operations; (h) condition of the sweat glands, active perspirers are less liable to heat-fever; (i) race, dark-skinned races are less susceptible, having a layer of pigment as a protection; (j) sex, women are less liable than men for their rate of metabolism i.e. food intake and tissue activity is usually lower, (k) liquid intake, the evaporation of one pint per hour may occur from the body, hence a good supply of fluid is needed to keep up the free loss of fluid; (l) diet, a diet rich in calories is conducive to heat-production, and heat-fever, it is better to avoid pork and excess of fat; (m) body build, stout people have a smaller area of skin surface in proportion to weight than slim people and so their cooling is less effective; (n) age, the disease is more frequent after 30 and in the very young babies; (o) overcrowding and bad ventilation are very important factors, in a closed room full of human beings the air humidity rises rapidly; if the air is also still, conditions are ideal for heat-stroke.

The early stage of the disease is most important as then it can be arrested if its onset is detected. A very early symptom is the passage of small quantities of urine at frequent intervals, dryness and heat of the skin and thirst. There is often a feeling of constriction of the chest, with headache, dizziness, photophobia and drowsiness. The face is usually flushed but may be pale. The conjunctiva are usually red and the pupils contracted.

The second stage is one of excitement. Often the disease is not detected until it has reached the second phase and the temperature has risen to 104° — to 107° F. or more. There is mental excitement, perhaps delirium and convulsions, restlessness, hot burning skin, irregular and rapid pulse, contracted pupils, hurried respirations, which may be stertorous, and intense headache.

The third stage is one of coma. If the patient is not treated energetically in the early stages he goes into a coma. The temperature rises to 108° and 110° F. The patient is usually unconscious, but he may be delirious and there may be convulsions; the corneal reflex is lost and there may be Cheyne-Stokes' breathing, cyanosis and incontinence. Death may result from asphyxia.

If proper treatment is carried out in the early stages, the patient will usually be out of danger in a day or two. As a rule there is irregular low fever for several days, but unless the temperature rises above 102° F. there is no need for alarm. During the first 24 hours the patient should be regarded as in grave danger and watched most carefully. In mild cases there are no bad after-effects, but when very high temperatures have occurred the patient is permanently damaged, both physically and mentally. Dementia follows in 10 per cent. of these cases and suicide in 5 per cent. Most patients whose temperature goes over 108° F. are left with an enfeebled brain—loss of memory, irritability, intolerance of heat and headache. The most important point to realize in diagnosing the condition is the likelihood of the occurrence of heat-fever when the weather conditions are trying. The danger is that it may be overlooked in a patient who is suffering from some other fever, such as malaria. The safe rule is to suspect heat-fever in all cases in which the weather conditions and the symptoms are in keeping with the diagnosis. Whatever the cause of a rapidly rising temperature, the proper line of action is to carry out hydrotherapy at once. Diagnosis is made according to the different type of disease, for example, from malaria, diagnosis is made by blood examination; from uraemia and diabetes, by examination of urine; from cerebral apoplexy, by loss of consciousness. Prognosis depends very much on the height of the temperature before treatment has brought it under control. If under 107° F. mortality is 8 per cent. Over 109° F. mortality is 70 per cent. Average mortality is 30 to 40 per cent.

Prompt Treatment Essential

Unfavourable factors are alcoholism, debility, old age, pregnancy, co-existence of another disease, such as heart, kidney or lung disease, post-operative weakness. Treatment with promptness and energy is vital to success. As first-aid measures, loosen the patient's clothing, place him in a cool place, douche him freely with cold water and fan him vigorously. Then steps should be taken to lower the temperature systematically. Place the patient on an iron bedstead covered with a mat; wrap his naked body in a sheet soaked in cold water and play the fan on him. Apply an ice cap to his head. A cold bath should be given if available, but not iced. Constantly massage the limbs in order to keep up circulation. Take the rectal temperature frequently. When the temperature has fallen to 102° F. dry the patient and put him to bed in a light blanket, keeping the ice-cap to the head. Take the rectal temperature every 15 minutes. If the temperature continues to fall, apply hot bottles to the limbs and body, and raise the foot of the bed. If the temperature rises again repeat the cold treatment. Cold enemata are of great value. If the pulse is feeble give injections of camphor and caffeine; saline injections with glucose may be given intravenously or by the rectum and artificial respiration may be found necessary.

During convalescence perfect rest in a cool and quiet room is essential. Light diet should be given, and the nurse should see that the patient has a regular action of the bowels. When the patient is fit he should be sent to a cool climate, and in severe cases, should not return to the tropics.

Prevention is, of course, the ideal, and the first essential is to recognize the existence of dangerous climatic conditions. Most cases of heat-stroke are the result of ignorance or carelessness, and can be prevented with due care. During prolonged heat all exercise should be avoided during the heat of the day, and the head and neck should be protected from the sun's rays. Loose, light clothing should be worn, a strict diet followed and no alcohol should be taken. Plenty of water should be drunk, and a fan should be used to keep the air moving. Wet towels may be applied but care must be taken to avoid excessive chilling; especially beware of chills in the abdomen. Report should be made at once if symptoms of heat-fever appear, such as dryness of the skin, frequent passing of urine, headache, giddiness or drowsiness.

(2) Heat-shock is a form of heat-stroke, but the prominent

MOORFIELDS Eye Hospital, London, has a world-wide reputation as the Mecca of the world of ophthalmology and was equipped to provide every kind of eye examination or treatment. Unfortunately the most recently added section of the hospital received a direct hit by a flying bomb this summer. All services were disorganized and fire in neighbouring buildings made it necessary to evacuate all patients at once. A business house took them in and quickly provided hot drinks for all and gave them shelter till ambulances could take them to other hospitals. Within seven weeks, however, the hospital re-opened and in-patients were admitted again, at first in the basement but later in wards in the older part of the building. Now there are

SUPPLEMENTARY FOR MENTAL NURSES

QUESTION I.—Describe the nursing of a patient suffering from general paralysis of the insane, including the nursing during any special treatment.

General paralysis of the insane is a condition of progressive mental and physical deterioration due to syphilis. If untreated the patient passes through three stages, onset with excitement, a period when fits and mental deterioration are marked, and a bedridden stage with extreme paralysis, incontinence, and no apparent mental activity. The mood and consequent behaviour varies between an excited type with delusions of grandeur, and a depressed type with delusions of guilt.

A patient I nursed, a man of 42, who had contracted syphilis 20 years before, was treated with malaria. He had a wife and 6 children under 12. He was a labourer who lost his job for inefficiency which he tried to hide by drinking.

When Mr. H. was admitted, he was underweight, very sallow, mildly depressed, but quiet and co-operative. He was walking well, but his tendon reflexes were brisk. His pupils were unequal, not irregular, and reacting normally. He was a little difficult to understand because of slurred speech. His blood and cerebro-spinal fluid were taken for Wasserman test and were positive.

Malarial treatment was recommended, and his wife signed a consent form as it "is not without risk." He was given an injection of malarial blood, after which he was nursed in a single room with the window and doorway protected by mosquito netting lest a mosquito carry the disease. He was nursed in bed, given a liberal diet, his temperature, pulse and respiration recorded four-hourly, and his weight once a week. He needed only an occasional aperient, and had no retention of urine. His pressure points were treated carefully. He was allowed a hip bath.

After 11 days, Mr. H. ran a temperature in the axilla of 99.6°F. From that time, temperature, pulse and respiration were recorded every quarter of an hour.

A long mackintosh was put into the bed, and preparations made for treating him in a rigor. For the shivering stage hot blankets, hot bottles and a hot drink were ready; bed blocks and a stimulant tray with Coramine were at hand, in case of collapse. For the sweating stage, towels, sponges, ice, a cradle, change of bed linen and pyjamas. Two glass slides and a sharp cutting edge needle, swab and spirit for taking a blood film, were prepared.

The rigor occurred in the afternoon. Hot blankets were applied and hot bottles packed around him outside the blanket to avoid burns. The hot drink could not be given at first owing to severe shivering but he took it later. His pulse became very rapid (134) and weak. His colour was ashen, his lips blue. He was reassured, and remained co-operative throughout. The doctor was informed when the rigor started and came to take a blood film before the temperature started to fall again. The temperature rose to 105°F, but not over, so that tepid sponging was not ordered. Blankets were removed, and a cradle put into the bed as the patient began to sweat and feel hot. Cold drinks of iced lemon and glucose were given, and when excessive sweating had stooped he was sponged with warm water, dried and his bed clothes and pyjamas changed. For the rest of the day he felt very ill. He took only fluids and complained of nausea.

The following day there was no rigor. He felt weak, but not so ill, and feeding was generous to make up for the previous day. Feeds of milk, Ovaltine, Horlicks, with biscuits, etc., were offered not less than two hourly. The doctor examined him to see if he would tolerate further rigors.

The rigors occurred on alternate days, increasing in severity, but not duration. Tepid sponging was ordered if the temperature went above 105°F. (This is not always done. Some doctors prefer not to interrupt a "strong" rigor).

Mr. H. had in all 10 rigors, but was becoming so weak that the treatment was terminated before the usual 12. After the tenth, he was ordered quinine, gr. xv, for an initial dose, and then gr. v., t.i.d. His spleen was enlarged, and he was given an iron tonic. He was allowed to get up gradually, and his general condition improved. He put on weight, lost his sallow look, became alert, cheerful and anxious to get back to work.

As there was no eye trouble, tryparsamide was started, injections being given once a week. Mr. H. was discharged and after a period of convalescence resumed work, but came up each week for injection. He was told he would have to come about once a year for examination and a lumbar puncture. Mrs. H. and the children had blood tests, and as she was positive, she was advised what to do.

PLANNING THE LOCAL HOSPITAL SERVICE

'Time after time we have repeated the axiom from the white-paper that if Parliament offers medical care free of charge, to those in need, it must place on somebody the responsibility for seeing that it is provided. The Government wanted this executive responsbiility to be borne in each medical area by an ad-hoc authority which should administer all the municipal hospitals of the area and plan the other services. Because executive powers of this kind can be vested only in elected representatives of the public, the new authority was to be formed of delegates from the local authorities—advised by a health services council of experts. This arrangement, however, gave displeasure in three quarters. The local authorities disliked it because they did not want to lose direct control of their hospitals and of money raised by their rates. The voluntary hospitals disliked it because their work was to be planned by a body on which they had no representation, formed by local authorities many of which have a poor record in hospital management. Doctors disliked it for the same reasons and because they mostly consider local authorities bad planners and bad employers. In face of this peculiar triple alliance, the Ministry of Health (as Lord Moran and Dr. Dain have now divulged) is prepared to examine an alternative scheme which will no longer place the administrative responsibility on the joint boards. The boards, reinforced by representatives of the voluntary hospitals and the profession, might remain as planning bodies; and in addition, as Lord Dawson suggested, there would certainly be need for regional planning councils to co-ordinate their work; but responsibility for the service would rest centrally on the Minister of Health and locally on the counties and county boroughs. The main objection to this concession, from our point of view, is that existing local authorities, bad as well as good, will retain full charge of their hospitals, which contain some two-thirds of all the hospital beds of the country. We have yet to learn by what means, other than withholding of grants, it will be possible to secure improvement of conditions for doctors and patients in the hospitals of backward authorities; and we also regret the loss of that efficiency which is achieved only when planning and administration are performed by the same body. On the other hand, the new scheme has two decided advantages in that it avoids an artificial administrative separation of clinics from hospitals and does nothing to damp the interest of progressive authorities in their own institutions. Undoubtedly, in remodelling the joint boards, the Ministry will go far to overcome the objections of the three parties supplying the service, and may secure from them the cordial co-operation necessary for success.'

INTERESTING CASE

3.—A War Casualty treated with Penicillin

By J. MARTIN,
Student Nurse at the Western General Hospital,
Edinburgh

Miss J. Martin with the Normandy casualty described in this article, whose wound has almost healed after penicillin treatment. Following a thigh injury he was treated for septic arthritis, penicillin being injected locally through a drainage tube into the hip joint and also later by powdered penicillin

ADMITTED on July 20, 1944, the patient had been serving with His Majesty's Forces in Normandy and was wounded at Caen, on July 4, by an 88 mm. shell. He had been resting in a trench during the afternoon, when the shell hit a tree not far from him, and the shrapnel fell into the trench, wounding him in the abdomen and left groin. An emergency operation was performed in a field hospital in France. On exploration it was found that the colon had been perforated and, accordingly, a colostomy was done at the laparotomy incision, close to the mid-line. The wound of entry was in the right groin and the fragment had passed obliquely upwards to enter the abdominal cavity. The femoral vessels and nerves were undamaged.

Symptoms and Appearances

On admission, the patient appeared tired and was rather irritable. He complained of severe pain on movement of his right leg and the left leg was very oedematous. He was disinclined for food, although eager for fluids. The right leg appeared to be painless until moved, when the patient became very excited and cried out in pain. Intermittent fever developed, with a rapid pulse and respiratory rate. The patient was restless, flushed and perspired freely. There was no headache or vomiting.

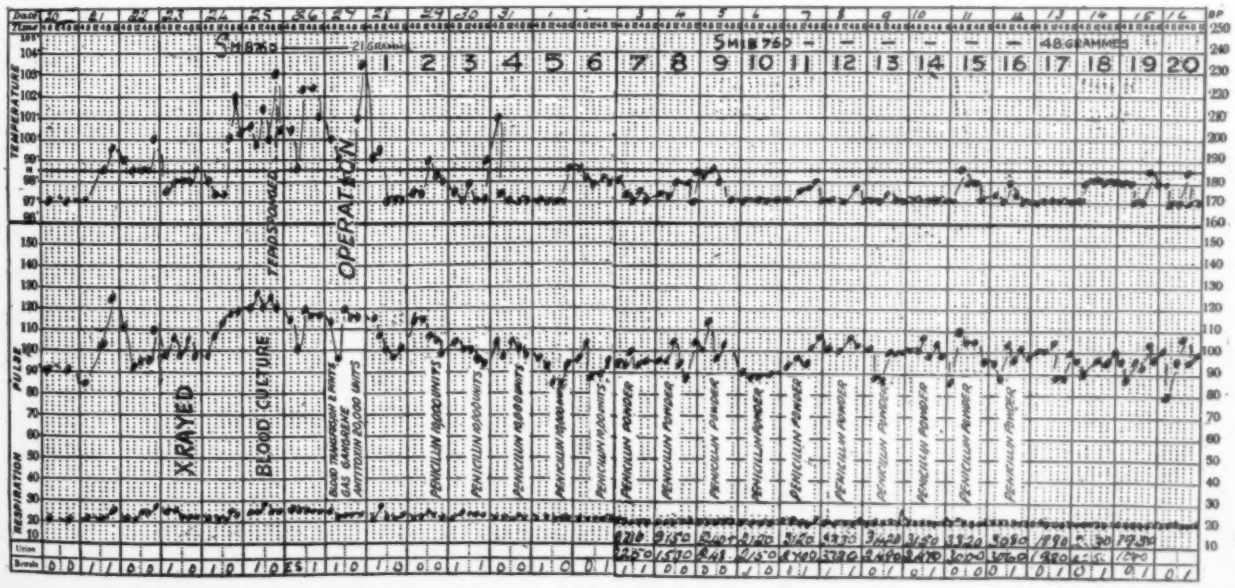
Diagnosis

The patient had the right hip X-rayed three days after admission, when there was found to be a septic arthritis of the right hip joint.

Treatment

The wounds were in a healthy condition on admission. The colostomy was not functioning as the patient was able to defaecate normally with the assistance of a glycerine suppository. When the wounds were being dressed the nurse and her assistant wore gowns, masks and head veils. The wounds were cleansed with hydrogen peroxide. Tulle gras and isotonic saline were applied daily. (Continued on page 48)

An interesting chart from the day of admission: it shows the immediate drop in temperature and gradual drop in pulse rate after operation and the administration of penicillin. Five doses were given of 10,000 units in 5c.c. of fluid with 10 c.c. of fluid of sterile normal saline added: it ran into the wound through tubing for 12 hours each day a clip closing the tube for the 12 hour interval



THE CREATION AND CONDUCT OF COMMITTEES*

By H. B. TRUMPER, B.A., B.Chir., M.A., M.B., Medical Air Liaison Officer, R.A.F.

Professional discussion: The Royal College of Nursing Council in session

MOST people have some idea of what is meant by a committee. During her training the nurse will have heard of 'the Lay Committee' and 'the Medical Committee' of her hospital. These are quite good examples of committee work and will serve to illustrate and define committees.

The board of the hospital, who are normally responsible for matters of policy, entrust certain of the hospital work to different bodies of people. In other words, they commit a certain task to them and thus become the committers and the people to whom the task is entrusted become the committee. The Lay Committee may be given the job of running the administration of the hospital and the Medical Committee be entrusted with all technical matters.

The position is similar in industry. The management of a company is normally in the hands of a board of directors, but as they could not possibly deal adequately with all the details of every side of the business, they commonly set up committees of their staff, their workers, or both, to deal with various parts of the company's activities. A manager is not unlike a committee of one person. Some of these committees have executive powers, while others are purely advisory, either to one particular director or to the board of directors as a whole.

Points to Remember

Anyone entrusted with the task of setting up a committee would do well to observe the following points:—(1) The committee's task must be clear and defined. (2) A committee should be as small as is consistent with due representation of the people whose views or ideas are needed. (3) One member at least should be capable of undertaking the important part of chairman. (4) One person at least should be capable and able to take on the onerous and important job of secretary to the committee.

The task given to a committee is commonly called its remit. The remit may be narrow and strictly limited—for example, to determine the area of land necessary for the tennis section of the sports club; or it may be very wide—for example, to review the present educational facilities for employees in the cotton industry and to advise on the best methods of providing liberal and vocational education for all concerned.

Small and Efficient

The fewer people on a committee the shorter the deliberations will be and the more likelihood there is of achieving unanimity on points of major issue.

The chairman should normally be elected at the first meeting of the committee, but sometimes the chairman is appointed by the body who sets up the committee.

The committee secretary is usually not a member of the committee, but he may be appointed a member if deemed advisable.

The success of any committee depends to a great extent on the work of its secretary.

The Chairman.—The duties of a chairman are to see that the remit of the committee is correctly carried out, to see that the proceedings of the committee are conducted in a proper and orderly manner, and particularly to ascertain the sense of the meeting towards any question which is properly before the Committee, so that the decisions of the committee may be properly recorded.

He should observe the following elementary points:—(1) All remarks must be addressed to the chair. (2) Sotto voce observations should be suppressed. (3) Everybody should have an opportunity of speaking once upon the motion. (4) He must deal with points of order as they arise. (5) After satisfying himself that everybody has had an opportunity of speaking he must close the debate and put either any relevant amendment or the motion itself to the vote. (6) Subject to any casting vote that he may have under the constitution, the chairman should strive to act impartially.

The Secretary.—The duties of the secretary are to prepare the agenda, write the minutes, to notify the committee's decisions, and act as the executive officer of the committee.

Clear and Comprehensive

The Agenda.—The preparation of the agenda is in practice left with the secretary, but he should consult his chairman in all doubtful matters. Care is necessary in drawing up an agenda. It must be comprehensive and should specify each item of business to be dealt with at the meeting. It should be circulated well in advance of the meeting to all members. A good form for the agenda is to have the matters of business set out in summary form on the left-hand side reserving the right-hand side for notes.

Minutes.—These are usually written by the secretary as soon as possible after the meeting. They should be numbered consecutively in a series and should show only the decisions recorded at a meeting, preceded possibly by a short account of the essential points leading up to the decision. Minutes are not intended to be a record of conversations. They should show the names of the members present. They are approved by the committee as a correct record and may be signed by the chairman of the meeting or of the next succeeding meeting of the committee. They should always be in the first item of the agenda. Should a member be of the opinion that the minutes have neen incorrectly recorded no other business should be transacted until the correctness of the minutes has been agreed upon. It is preferable that the minutes of a meeting should be circulated to all the members before the next meeting, but if this is not done the chairman of the next meeting should call upon the secretary to read the minutes clearly and in full at that meeting, so that they may be confirmed or corrected as may be found necessary.

Standing Orders.—Many committees are in being which have no standing orders, and it is left to the good sense of the members and the guidance of the chairman to keep the proceedings in proper channels. Established committees which meet regularly, and will continue to do so indefinitely, and which are of major importance, may well have their own standing orders of procedure. These are normally drawn up by the committee and deal with such matters as the time and place of regular meetings, the number forming the quorum, order of business, appointments to offices under the committee, and so on.

General Notes for the Guidance of Committee Members.—Read the remit of your committee carefully and stick to the point when you speak. Address all your remarks to the chair. Make brief notes of points made by other members so that you may more readily sum up the position before being called upon to decide for or against the proposition before the meeting. Always say what you think and use ordinary conversational phrases. It is a common fault for people inexperienced in committee work to use long words and involved phrases. If you disagree with the rest of the committee you can insist that your disagreement be recorded in the minutes, even though yours is the only dissentient vote.

People who are ignorant of committee procedure sometimes feel that they ought to resign from any committee (of which they may be a member) if they find themselves in general disagreement. This is quite wrong. Such an individual may be of the utmost use because he or she holds views contrary to the majority of the other members.

Notes for the Guidance of Nurses.—A nurse in industry may be invited or appointed to a committee usually in one of three capacities :—(1) As a member of a professional committee to deal with technical points connected with her profession. (2) As a member of a committee in which she is the sole representative of medical thought. (3) As a member of an executive committee in which she takes her place as a member of the management.

With regard to membership of a professional committee of nurses little need be said. The nurse need not concern herself with any complication which may ensue if she gives her views and observes the ordinary rules of procedure. The same applies to membership of an executive committee of management; it is only necessary for the nurse to remember that she may embarrass her relationship with employees if she accepts membership.

Representing Medical Thought

The nurse may be asked to sit on a committee of which she is the representative of medical thought, and is, in fact, asked to sit for this reason. Complications may arise if her views differ widely from the rest of the committee, and it may even involve her professional status. It is usually wiser for the nurse to attend meetings of such a committee in order to give her views, but not to accept membership of the committee.

Book Reviews

NURSES HANDBOOK OF OBSTETRICS.—By Louise Zabriskie, R.N. and N. J. Eastman, M.D. (J. B. Lippincott, Co., Aldine House, Bedford Street, W.C.2. Price 21s.).

This is the seventh edition of an obstetric handbook written by an American graduate nurse and a doctor. This latest edition has been entirely re-written and Miss Zabriskie has been fortunate enough to obtain as joint author the Professor of Obstetrics in the Johns Hopkins University.

Many things about the book are strange to English readers. The fact that the midwife, as known in this country, does not exist in America, means that any American book on obstetrics which is designed for nurses has gaps in the explanation of advanced subjects that make it unsuitable for use by English midwives and pupil midwives unless it is used in addition to another text book. There is a very large section given over to the care of the baby which would be appreciated by all English midwives. Some of the photographs in this section, as elsewhere, seem rather unnecessary. For instance, nineteen pages and twenty seven photographs are devoted to the bathing of the baby, a procedure which would always be taught practically. The apparatus advised for all technique seems very elaborate, but perhaps the formidable array of requirements for artificial feeding is a subtle way of promoting breast feeding !

There are 373 illustrations in all, some of them photographs, and some diagrams. Almost all are very skilfully executed Particularly good are the coloured plates to show pigmentation during pregnancy and the diagram showing the position of the foetal head at various stages during its descent of the birth canal. An interesting feature of the book is the insertion of ' self evaluation ' tests at the end of each chapter. By working through these the student is able to assess her progress. She is also provided with blank pages for personal notes.

This book may be recommended as a useful addition to the library of a midwifery school, as its simple language and good pictures will make it a popular book, but it should not be used as the sole text book of any midwife or pupil-midwife.

YOUR DAILY BREAD. By Doris Grant (Faber and Faber, 24 Russell Square, W.C.1. Price 4s. 6d.)

This is both a readable and a provocative book. It begins with a chapter headed " Murdered Bread," by which title the author describes the white loaf that forms the staple diet of the vast majority of our population and to whose " refinement " she attributes much of the illness that costs us, as a nation, 31½ million weeks of work a year. The second chapter, " Living Bread," recounts exactly why the extraction of the living germ and the husk is of such disastrous consequence. Not only are we thereby deprived, she contends, of a large part of the vitamin content necessary to health, but the whole nicely calculated balance of the different constituents is upset in a way that cannot be compensated by the addition of other sources of vitamins.

But Mrs. Grant is not content with telling her readers what they should do and why they should do it. She proceeds also to tell how, giving detailed instructions and recipes for the making of 100 per cent. whole grain bread, together with menus for a fully balanced diet. It is a complete design for living—even the names of millers and instructions for making garden compost are included—and leaves no excuse for those who profess to be convinced if they do not follow the advice. It is certainly difficult, in face of all the concrete evidence the author produces—the Bolton experiment, the Cheshire Memorandum, Sir Albert Howard's ideal tribesmen of India and Dr. Picton's hilarious guinea-pigs—not to be convinced at least to the extent of giving the natural produce of our fields a trial. Once convinced, we have only ourselves to blame for the retribution nature will exact if we fail to make insistent demand both for ourselves and our fellow-countrymen for bread as our forefathers knew it up to 1840, made from " the grain, the whole grain and nothing but the grain."

SOCIAL ASPECTS OF TUBERCULOSIS.—By S. Roodhouse Gloyne, M.D. (Faber & Faber, 24, Russell Square, London, W.C.1. Price 8s. 6d.)

The theory that statistics and tables must, of necessity, make a dull book, is found to be entirely wrong in the 'Social Aspects of Tuberculosis.' The figures quoted by Dr. Gloyne are illuminating, and the whole text is written in such a simple and clear manner that the reader's attention is held all the time.

The book contains some facts which will be new to many : doubtless it will come as a surprise to some that ' the application of percussion to clinical medicine should have come so late ' (1761); and also that ' erythema nodosum in about 50 per cent. of cases is a prodromal sign of tuberculosis.'

The author stresses the need for maternity units in sanatoria; and brings his writing up to date by a description of mass-radiography. Many hospital nurses will be interested to read that Dr. Gloyne advocates frequent X-rays of nursing staffs, and shorter periods of night-duty !

There is an excellent chapter on tuberculosis in industry which shows a keen awareness of the psychological side, and in future editions another chapter on the psychology of the tuberculous patient and his particular needs would be appreciated and would even more enhance the value of the book.

Though written primarily for health visitors and tuberculosis nurses, the book is one which should be read by every nurse, hospital or industrial, but owing to its somewhat high price, it may not be within the reach of all. In any case, there should be at least one copy in every nursing staff reference library.

PROFESSIONAL ADJUSTMENTS II.—By Gene Harrison, A.B., R.N. (Henry Kimpton, 26, Bloomsbury Way, W.C.1. Price 18s.)

The nurse in present day America is here seen adjusting herself to her training school. She is then helped to choose her career as a trained nurse by descriptions of the various types of work open to her in hospitals and health services. The third and fourth sections deal with professional organisations and activities and with the nurse's personal problems of economic and social security. The book gives a very illuminating cross-section of the American nursing world. The religious and ethical aspects of the profession receive strong emphasis throughout. Trained nurses and administrators in this country will find the book interesting.

Learning to Live : a word of encouragement to the patient.

(National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, Tavistock House, W.C.1, specimen copies free, 10s. per 100.)

This excellent but tiny booklet seeks to encourage and canalize the intellectual and creative activities of the sanatorium and ex-sanatorium patient. It is full of practical suggestions with names and addresses of educational bodies which may help. Nurses would do well to read it so they may help their patients to adjust their lives.

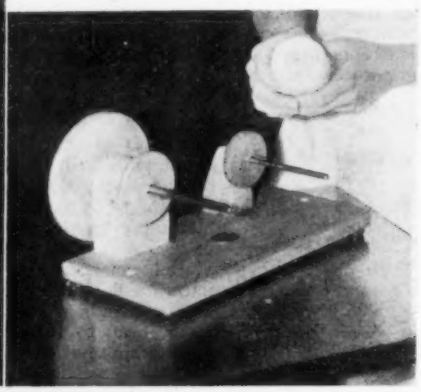
SAVING TIME AND LABOUR
— a modern device



Left : The bandage winder in use. It is mounted on four rubber pads which prevents it from slipping on a polished surface and keeps it quite steady

THESE pictures show a new bandage winder which has the advantage of simplicity and strength and is a very efficient and time-saving machine. New ideas incorporated in the winder are that the shaft on which the bandage is wound is tapered slightly towards the free end; this allows the tightly wound bandage to slip easily off the shaft without any pulling out of the end; there is no need to wind in the reverse direction to free the end before removing the bandage. To keep the bandage running satisfactorily a fixed rod is provided with a small guide above it just sufficiently far from the rod to take one thickness of the material : this makes it easy to keep the bandage straight and feed the winder quickly. There is little to get out of order, and the machine, made in strong wood, should last well and save a great deal of time. The makers offer a month's free trial to an institution : the price is £2 2s.

Whither English?

With increasing concern for the traditions of the profession we hear and see a deplorable state of affairs with regard to our terminology. Whoever coined the phrase " Not Complaining " or allowed the verbal use of " Resps " ? Such words as " Dopey " and " Bubbly " not infrequently appear in written reports, and with alarming speed this debasement of our mother-tongue assumes endemic proportions. At this time, more than at any other, the nursing profession seeks the road towards greater scholastic achievement within its ranks. Some even hope for a Chair of Nursing in one of our great universities. Surely the logical outcome of these aspirations should make us wage perpetual war against all sounds and signs which manifest mental debility !

Anyone with recent experience of training schools will defend the sister tutors in the matter of " English." They deplore with vehemence the use of abbreviations in any form. The lapse occurs in the wards and even matron's office, where all too often it is passed unchallenged. We are struck with horror and bewilderment at " T/N " or " N/C " and dream of the days when the alphabet was not used as a cipher and such words as " Afebrile " or " Condition unchanged," had their rightful place.

" Not complaining " strikes a servile note on the part of the patient, which is the antithesis of all we strive for.

We would do well to recollect a line from Samuel Johnson :

" Language is the dress of thought."

Burmese Nurse Pioneers

It was very interesting to me as one who worked for many years in the Civil General Hospital, Rangoon, Burma, to read in the Nursing Times of the experience of its matron, Miss Maxfield, and of her escape from the Japanese.

More years than I care to remember have passed since the morning when Miss Micklejohn (matron) came to my wards with two Burmese girls in her wake, saying they are going to help with the nursing of the patients, in female wards to begin with. They were well-educated girls from the Normal Government School, and spoke English fairly well. The two girls were the pioneers of the Burmese nurses to-day. They soon had in their charge the Burmese Nurses Home with the home sister. More and more Burmese girls were coming into the profession; a new maternity hospital was being planned, and Rangoon was to have its own university. I feel so grieved at what has happened to it all after so much hard work had been put into it. I congratulate Miss Maxfield on the honour bestowed on her, and on her remarkable escape.

IN MEMORY

It is intended to put up a memorial tablet in the hospital chapel to Miss E. A. Woodhouse, the late Matron of St. Andrew's Hospital, Bow. Donations are invited from all past members of the staff. Please send to the assistant matron.

A PRESENTATION

Miss N. B. Woodman, matron of Lambeth Hospital, is retiring in February of this year. The nursing staff are making a presentation to her and former nurses are invited to join. Contributions should be sent to the Assistant Matron, Lambeth Hospital.

Other correspondence held over until next issue.

When the diagnosis of septic arthritis of the right hip joint was made, the patient, after an injection of morphia, gr. ¼, and atropine, gr. 1/150, at 11 a.m., was removed to the operating theatre, where an incision was made through the original wound in the groin and continued over the area of the right hip joint. Drainage tubes were inserted into the wound which was irrigated with acriflavine solution, 1 in a 1000. The leg was immobilized in a Hodgson's splint with traction. On return from the theatre two pints of whole blood were administered intravenously, and 20,000 units of gas-gangrene antitoxin were given intramuscularly. The patient had an injection of morphia, gr. ¼, at 10 p.m. The patient was put on a full course of sulphathiazole. Anaerobic organisms of the gas-gangrene group were found present and, accordingly, penicillin, 10,000 units, was run into the drainage tubes, which were subsequently closed for twelve hours and unclipped for twelve hours. (The penicillin was measured out as five cubic centimetres of fluid, and enclosed in a sterile rubber stoppered bottle. Ten cubic centimetres of sterile normal saline was added to the fluid before administration.) In all, 50,000 units of penicillin were given, and the patient's condition improved.

There was very little discharge from the wound and no odour. The wound was still irrigated daily with hydrogen peroxide, and tulle gras and acriflavine solution 1 in 1000 applied. After five days the tubes were removed and the running in of penicillin solution stopped. For the next ten days the wound was insufflated with penicillin and sulphanilamide powder, 30,000 units.

The patient's condition continued to improve. The colostomy became overgrown with epithelium, and granulating tissue covered the wound of the right hip. The wound of the left groin healed completely. The oedema of the left leg subsided with elevation of the limb. The patient was encouraged to move about by means of a pulley attached to the Balkan frame to which his right leg was hung. His appetite returned and his bowels were normal. Aspirin, phenacetin and codein, gr. 1/8, and Luminal, gr. 1, and liquid paraffin, ½ oz., were given three times a day. The condition of the right hip joint is now so improved that it is ready for enclosure in a plaster of paris cast.

A Very 'FINE' ANTACID

The speed and thoroughness with which an antacid acts, depends to a great extent upon its technical perfection and the degree of fineness in which it is presented to the system. These features of a product cannot always be detected by the naked eye. You must make sure, therefore, that you use or recommend a brand which is of the highest quality. Maclean Brand Stomach Powder is "Fine" in the sense of being effective because in addition to its excellent formula, it is uniquely "fine" in texture. Recommended for cases of Excessive Acidity, Flatulence, Heartburn, Nervous Dyspepsia and similar gastric disturbances.

THE REHABILITATION OF THE WORKER SUFFERING FROM NERVOUS DISORDERS*

2.—The Role of the Doctor

By Dr. T. M. LING, M.D., M.R.C.P.

A hundred years ago this girl would probably have lived a quiet and sheltered life. The strain of modern conditions has shown a great increase in psycho-neurosis and often expert medical treatment is urgently needed by men and women

DR. T. M. Ling, medical director, Roffey Park Medical Rehabilitation Centre, began his address by saying that many people were away from work, sick, simply because they were suffering from the stress and strain of their environment at home and at work—because, perhaps, they did not satisfy their departmental manager, or because, when the day appeared to be over and everyone trooped home, they had ill mothers to contend with or were suffering from separation from their husbands or children.

No Anchor

'We not only know more about psychoneurosis in all its forms to-day,' he said, 'but it is more common than it was one hundred years ago. The fluctuations of general conditions and wars, combined with the absence of a firm religious background, have left many people with no anchor to their emotional life.

A series of interviews before the war amongst healthy workers showed that 30 per cent. had psychoneurotic symptoms and 8 to 10 per cent. were in urgent need of treatment. If we found such figures for, say, orthopaedic conditions, we should feel that arrangements were imperfect and get them put right.

There is a great deal we can do for people with psychoneurosis: we must accept the fact that their condition exists, that there is nothing to be ashamed of in reacting to adverse factors of environment or intra-psychic life. These states of anxiety or insecurity often date back to some adverse adolescent factor and have been precipitated by present conditions. We must realize, too, that just to give four weeks' rest to a person with nervous debility, is about as much help as to give four weeks' rest to a person who has a fractured femur.

Time to Listen

You cannot deal with these people in a busy surgery. Be firm and ask such a patient to come back in the afternoon when you can give him half an hour in circumstances of reasonable privacy. You must develop your capacity for friendly listening—a capacity which is as easy to learn as the aseptic technique of the ordinary operating theatre. You will be surprised how much people will tell you if you listen in an ordinary, worldly, understanding way, and are prepared to offer your advice without moralizing.

Many people do not require a complete psychiatric interview, and as there are not enough psychiatrists to go round you have an important part to play. You can help to adjust the patient's environment by suggesting the arrangement of shifts, night work and overtime. It makes such a lot of difference to have someone who understands and will help to ameliorate conditions. These people are emotionally frail and need someone to lean on: we would all be prepared to arrange for an old poliomyelitis to have a chair to sit on when he works. It is equally important to arrange for a certain amount of sheltering of the patient with psychoneurosis.

Some patients are more difficult. They fail in their work and show the early mental symptoms of depression and weeping. They are ill, just as if they had pneumonia, and you must see that they receive proper investigation at an out-patient clinic, such as that on Monday and Wednesday afternoon (by appointment) at the Maudesley Hospital, or, if they need in-patient care, in a neurosis or medical rehabiliation centre such as we are setting up at Roffey Park for working men and women.

Here we hope to provide patients with an understanding of themselves, so that they can do intelligent occupational therapy, using their hands in genuine creative work. Present civilization so often thwarts this fundamental instinct. We are providing pleasant grounds, good reproduction of pictures, good music, and our own garden produce for a first-class diet. The population as a whole so often eats poorer diet than it should, and this, especially lack of vitamin C, is probably a factor in the cause of psychoneuroses. No nervous disorder has only one cause: there are always many, some more important than others, and diet is one that we should always seek to remedy.

Variety

I urge you to see that there is a certain amount of latitude in the jobs these people do; so often they are revitalized by a change. While you cannot have continual 'musical chairs,' you can study your patient and arrange a move for him now and again.

We are going to arrange training courses at Roffey Park for doctors, and also for nurses, social workers and labour managers. They will be mixed together for their own good, for they are all workers for health. The nursing profession already does, and will, make a large contribution to the welfare of these patients. If you find that they irritate you beyond measure you are in the wrong place, and have no right to deal with people in ordinary life, for whether you like it or not, the problems are there and the people calling out for help to be given them.

symptoms are those of shock instead of pyrexia.

(3) Heat-exhaustion produces symptoms of shock, giddiness, faintness, pallor of face and sometimes nausea or vomiting. The skin is usually clammy; a feeble and rapid pulse may be followed by syncope and death. In slight cases, rest in a horizontal position in a cool room with mild stimulants will be sufficient treatment. In severe cases the usual treatment for shock is needed.

(4) Heat cramp is also a form of heat-stroke, and affects people who are doing severe manual work in hot places—ships' stokers are particularly liable to it. The symptoms are severe muscular cramp and the causes are exposure to great heat with excessive sweating which causes depletion of blood chlorides. Treatment consists of rest in a cool place and 1 dram of sodium chloride should be given by the mouth three times a day. In severe cases intravenous injections of hypertonic saline are indicated.

Solar Dermatitis.—This is an inflammation of the skin caused by excessive exposure to the ultra-violet rays of the sun. When the skin has been over-exposed to the rays nothing is felt for a few hours, after which there is smarting or burning with redness and oedema of the skin. After two or three days desquamation occurs, followed by increased pigmentation. In some cases blistering may occur and possibly malaise and rise of temperature due to absorption of toxins. Treatment should be preventative: suitable clothing for arms, legs and neck should be worn, an umbrella used, and soothing applications such as calamine lotion applied.

Glare Headache.—Excessive light falling on the retina may cause headache. Excessive light may also cause temporary blindness which may be followed by permanent blindness. Even small doses of strong light produce glare headache and snow, particularly if the sun is brilliant, is dangerous. Dark glasses should be worn as a preventive measure whenever the sun is dazzling.

Preventable Casualties

I wonder if it is realized that almost as many children died last year from diphtheria as were killed by bombs, yes, and by flying bombs too, during the whole of 1943 and the first nine months of 1944. And yet, diphtheria is a disease we can do so much, so easily to prevent.—The Health of the Nation. A Broadcast by Sir Wilson Jameson, Chief Medical Officer, Ministry of Health.

Costly Experiment

THE loss of £2,000 in the year commencing 1943 in the Forfar Day Nursery which will be bourne by the National Exchequer would, if it had to be met out of the rates, represent a charge of 7d. in the £. Latest figures for the number of children in the nursery were not available but it was understood there were about 40.

Island Nursing

SUGGESTIONS for overcoming transport difficulties in providing the islands off the western coast with adequate nursing care, include the appointment of an additional district nurse at Islay who would visit Jura periodically and in emergency, the use of air transport to take nurses from the mainland to Colonsay and Gigha, and the provision of motor cars for district nurses in the scattered districts of Argyll.

CENTRAL MIDWIVES BOARD

First Examination (November, 1944)

1. Describe the anatomy of the breast. What conditions do you consider give the best opportunity for successful breast-feeding ?

2. A primigravida 39 weeks pregnant is found to have the head above the pelvic brim. What are the causes of this condition and how should a midwife deal with such a case ?

3. How would you recognize an occipito-posterior presentation (a) during pregnancy, (b) during labour ? Describe how you would conduct the labour of such a case.

4. Describe the urinary complications that may occur during the puerperium. How may these be prevented ? What is the appropriate treatment ?

5. A breast-fed baby fails to gain weight during the second week after birth. What steps would you take to ascertain the cause and what treatment would you adopt ?

6. What drugs are most commonly used by a midwife (a) to stimulate uterine contractions, (b) to relieve pain, during labour and the puerperium ? State the rules of the Central Midwives Board which regulate the use of drugs by midwives.

Obituaries

Miss A. E. Cable

We regret to announce the death of Miss A. E. Cable, founder member of the Royal College of Nursing. A trainee of the London Hospital, E.1, Miss Cable served in South Africa during the Boer War after which she received the R.R.C. She was matron of the General Infirmary, Salisbury for 18 years and even after her retirement continued to take an active part in nursing affairs through the Royal College of Nursing.

Miss A. Cook

We regret to announce the death of Miss A. Cook, assistant matron of Hull Municipal Maternity and Children's Hospital. A trainee of the London Homoeopathic Hospital, W.C.1, and the General Lying-in Hospital, S.E.1. Miss Cook spent nine years as senior midwifery sister at the Hull Municipal Maternity Hospital before becoming assistant matron.

Miss M. M. Murray Mackay

It is with deep regret we record that Miss Mary Margaret Murray Mackay, S.R.N., S.C.M., sister, Territorial Army Nursing Service, has died in Middle East after an operation for appendix abscess. Miss Mackay received her training at the Royal Infirmary, Aberdeen, from March, 1933, to November, 1936. She became an enrolled member in the Territorial Army Nursing Service in December, 1936, and was embodied for military service with the T.A.N.S. in November, 1939. She was an experienced theatre sister. Her home is in Sutherlandshire.

Miss J. D. Murray

WE regret to announce the death at her training school, the Warneford Hospital, Leamington Spa, of Miss J. D. Murray, S.R.N., S.C.M., late matron of Hertford Hill Sanatorium. Miss Murray was a member of the Royal College of Nursing and of the Hospital Matrons' Association.

Miss G. H. Vaughan

We much regret to announce the death on October 3 of Miss Grace H. Vaughan, who for thirteen years was nursing superintendent of the Queen's Institute of District Nurses. Previous to holding this important position, Miss Vaughan was superintendent of the Westminster District Nursing Association and was particularly well known to Queen's nurses as she was one of those farseeing people who helped to found the Queen's Nurses' Benevolent Fund, which has been such a boon to so many of them in times of illness and in permanent disability. Miss Vaughan also edited the Queen's Nurses' Magazine for many years and endeared herself to many through its pages. She was a champion for all that is right and beautiful, and she used her artistic gifts for the benefit and pleasure of many of her friends. She retired from active work on August 30, 1935, but kept in touch with many of her old friends, who will greatly miss her.

Industrial Nurses' Course at Coventry

Will nurses taking the course for industrial nurses at Coventry (announced in the Nursing Times of January 13) notify the secretary of the Coventry Branch, Mrs. Heloron, 7, Tennyson Road, Coventry, by Tuesday, January 23.

Public Health Section within the Tunbridge Wells and District Branch.—The Section recently formed has arranged its first general meeting for Saturday, January 20, at 2.45 p.m., at the Queen's District Nurses Home, 23, Lansdowne Road, Tunbridge Wells. The secretary to the Public Health Section, Mrs. Hamblin, has promised to speak, or to send a representative. All trained nurses who are eligible to join the Section will be welcome. Tea will be provided.

Branch Reports

Aberdeen Branch.—A very interesting talk was given by Miss McInroy, senior sister tutor, Glasgow Royal Infirmary, to members of the Branch. Miss Kaye, Matron, Aberdeen, Royal Infirmary, took the chair. After the secretary read a letter of apology from Miss Udell, who was to have given the talk, but owing to her recent secondment to U.N.R.R.A. was unable to do so, Miss Kaye introduced Miss McInroy and spoke of the work she had done for the nursing profession and the part she had taken on the Horder Committee. The subject of the talk was " Current Events." The speaker dealt ably with the different problems facing the nursing profession at present and in the future. Among matters discussed were : the assistant nurse, social insurance, superannuation, recruitment, the block system, the Horder Report, and sister tutor and industrial nurses' courses. Questions by members were answered by Miss McInroy. Miss Wilson, member of Aberdeen Royal Infirmary staff proposed a vote of thanks to the speaker which met with enthusiastic response.

St. Alban's Branch (in formation).—On April 11, at 3 p.m., there will be a talk on Malta, at the St. Albans Queen's Nurses' Home, 29, Beaconsfield Road, by invitation of Miss Mayho, superintendent. On May 7, at 5 p.m., there will be a lecture on the production of a newspaper followed by a visit to the Herts Advertiser printing works, at Bricket House, Bricket Road, St. Albans. In June a visit to Cell Barnes Colony by invitation of Miss Challons, matron, will be arranged. See also Nursing Times January 6, page 20.

Glasgow Branch.—The annual general meeting of the branch will be held in the Scottish Nurses' Club, 203, Bath Street on Thursday, January 25, at 7.30 p.m. Agenda will be as circulated to members. A general meeting to approve the Royal College of Nursing memorandum on " The Place of Nursing in a National Health Service " was held at the Scottish Nurses' Club, 203, Bath Street, on January 3. Miss McInroy, president and chairman, went over each section in turn and members agreed or criticized There was some discussion about Item 7, Section 1 (Distribution) which was thought to be phrased rather vaguely. One member proposed that it was likely that there would have to be some form of direction of nurses during the transition period, the Ministry of Health would be a more appropriate body than the Ministry of Labour to take charge of the task of distribution. Members were not all agreed either, that the enrolled assistant nurse had a definite place in the district nursing service. Several of the Public Health Section members expressed the view that only the trained nurse was suitable for domiciliary nursing. With these two exceptions members were satisfied with the memorandum. Miss Stewart, the Area Organizer, was present at the meeting.

Gloucester and Cheltenham Branch.—A meeting will be held at the Royal Infirmary, Gloucester, on Wednesday, January 24, at 2.30 p.m. The agenda will include : minutes of last meeting; Ward and Departmental Sister's Group report; Correspondence and any other business. Miss P. W. Major, S.R.N., S.C.M., will give a talk on : Industrial Nursing. The annual meeting will be held at Cheltenham in February.

Hastings Branch.—A meeting of ward and departmental sisters will be held at the Royal East Sussex Hospital, Hastings, on Wednesday, January 24, at 3 p.m., by kind invitation of Miss G. Martindale, Matron. Miss W. D. Christie, Royal College of Nursing, Eastern Area organizer, will speak on " The Place of the Ward and Departmental Sister within the Profession To-day," and the organizers hope to form a Ward and Departmental Sisters Group within the Hastings Branch. Tea will be provided and sisters intending to be present are asked to notify Miss Martindale by Monday, January 22.

Leicester Branch.—A general meeting will be held at the Leicester Royal Infirmary, on Monday, January 22, at 6 p.m. to receive the report on the recent meeting of the Branches Standing Committee. Nominations for Branch Officers for 1945 are asked for.

Plymouth and District Branch.—A " Brains Trust " organized by Miss M. A. Paske, sister tutor, will take place on Wednesday, January 24, at 7 p.m., at the Prince of Wales Hospital, Greenbank. Col. Stafford, director of B.B.C., Dr. Andrew Scotland, secretary of education, Dr. M. R. Thomas, assistant pathologist, Prince of Wales's Hospital, Mr. C. P. Brown, managing director of Beechwood's, and chairman of the Prince of Wales's Hospital and one other will take part. Would you please send your questions to Miss Paske well in advance of the date. A dance in aid of the Nation's Fund for Nurses, organized by Miss R. S. Dennis, matron, will be held at the City Hospital, Plymouth, on Wednesday, February 7, at 8.30 p.m., Tickets may be obtained from the secretary, Miss C. A. Howard, City Isolation Hospital, Beacon Park Road, Plymouth. A whist drive, in aid of Branch funds, was organized by Miss D. M. Williams and was held at The Three Towns Nursing Association, Durnford Street, Plymouth, on Saturday, January 6. It is hoped that Miss M. F. Hughes will be able to visit us towards the end of March.

Watford and District Branch.—A meeting was held at the Peace Memorial Hospital on December 1, 1944, when there was a very interesting demonstration by Miss Walsh of the Bunyan-Stannard Envelope Treatment of Burns. The next meeting will be at the County Hospital, Harefield on Saturday January 20, at 2.45 p.m., when Dr. W. M. McPhail, Rehabilitation Officer, will speak on " Rehabilitation."

York and Ainsty Branch.—A Lecture on " X-ray Diagnosis and Treatment of Malignant Disease," by Dr. C. N. Pulvertaft, M.B., B.Ch., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., London, D.M.R.E., will be given at the County Hospital on Thursday, January 25 at 7 p.m.

ABOUT OURSELVES

Right: Bedford County Hospital: Mr. J. Arnold Whitchurch presents the "Whitchurch" prize for the best work of the year to Miss Myrtle Ferriman, staff nurse. On left of picture is Mr. H. R. Neate, and on right, Miss B. Shand (matron) and the Mayor and Mayoress of Bedford, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Canvin

Concert at St. Giles

A very pleasant evening was enjoyed at St. Giles' Hospital on the occasion of the staff Christmas concert on Friday, December 30. The highlight of the evening was a presentation of the trial scene from The Merchant of Venice, extraordinarily well played by Miss Brett, Miss Johnson, Miss Skinner, Miss A. E. Jones, Miss Reynolds, Miss Payne, Miss Hunt, and Miss Cooper.

Mr. Williams and Mr. Hearne were prominent in band numbers and were ably supported by the chorus—all in Dutch costume; Miss Stebbens and Mr. Plowman both gave professional renderings of popular ballads. Dr. Randle, popular medical superintendent, gave two piano medleys, the audience joining in. Miss Walker, sister tutor, was producer and Mr. Scott was an effective compere.

No reference to the concert would be complete without comment on the professional appearance of all the costumes, every one made by the nursing staff, and the high degree of ingenuity displayed in the stage, scenery and lighting.

Prizegiving at Dewsbury

Dewsbury and District General Infirmary Annual Prizegiving was held on November 2. Miss C. M. Throughton, headmistress, Templefield Senior Girls' School, Dewsbury, presented the prizes and addressed the nurses.

Prizes were awarded as follows:—Theory and Practice of Nursing (Senior examination), Miss Hobson. Theory and Practice of Nursing (Junior examination), Miss Firth. Examiners' Prize given to the nurse who obtained 2nd place in the Senior Nursing examination, Miss Wood. Medicine and Medical Nursing, Miss Hird. Surgery and Surgical Nursing, Miss Andrews. Gynaecology, Miss Wood. Food Values and Sick Cookery, First set, Miss Stokes. Second set, Miss Broadley. Matron's Prize for Best Nurse of the first year, Miss Quigley. Sister Tutor's Prize for the best nurse in the Preliminary Training Schools, Miss Eastham.

Christmas Gaieties

An unusually good Christmas Concert was given by the nurses at the City Sanatorium, Birmingham. The Hospital is lucky in having two professional artists: Miss L. Kettlewell, Sister, who was the principal singer and has a very beautiful contralto voice, and Miss Ridgway, once a London dancer and now a student nurse, who directed the dancing.

Twenty nurses took part. There was a classical ballet to the music of Strauss, a Nativity tableau, some Lancashire monologues, and an Irish nurse did some dainty folk dancing. Patients and staff alike were helpless with laughter over the operation in search of a penny whistle.

Prizes at York

more appetising and more digestible

Patients will readily take their full quantity of milk when it is served in the form of Little Miss Muffet Junket. Four delicious fruit flavours give different taste and delicate colour to the finished dish, and so appetite is encouraged, especially if the junket is made and served in individual glasses.

Little Miss Muffet Junket is milk in its most easily digested form. The milk is actually pre-digested by the action of the rennin enzyme, which breaks up the tough leathery curds into soft fine ones.

In all cases where milk is allowed, Little Miss Muffet Fruit Flavoured Junkets may be given. In gastro-intestinal cases, Little Miss Muffet Junket supplies milk in pre-digested form. After tonsillectomies and mouth treatments, Little Miss Muffet Junket is cool and soothing. It can be included in ulcer diets, generally after the tenth day. In nephritis, diabetes (sweetened with saccharine), and in all cases of convalescence, it makes a welcome change from plain junket, milk and milk puddings. May also be given to infants from 3 months upwards, and is useful to bridge the change-over from liquid to solid foods.

COMMON COLD

Common sense . .

THE common sense approach to the problem of the common cold is "Serocalcin" and people who maintain that colds are "inevitable" ignore facts. For more than eight years "Serocalcin" has been prescribed by the Medical Profession and the efficacy of "Serocalcin" for treatment or prophylaxis in some 8 out of 10 cases is now a matter of established fact.

"Serocalcin" (reg. trade mark) is a sulphoguaiacolic plasma precipitate which enhances the resistive capacity of the body against invading organisms that cause colds. It is contained in small tablets, easy and pleasant to take.

Three tablets, three times daily, will usually clear up a cold in 48 to 72 hours. Two tablets daily, for 30 consecutive days, provide immunity in some 8 out of 10 cases for a period of 3 to 4 months.

There are no "drugs" in "Serocalcin" and consequently no unpleasant reactions. It can be given to children with perfect safety.

A treatment pack of 20 "Serocalcin" tablets costs 3/4½ (Inc. tax). The full immunizing course of 60 tablets costs 8/5½ (Inc. tax.). All who suffer from the common cold are invited to send 1d. stamp (to comply with regulations) for booklet "Immunity from Colds."
